SAN JOSE—January 20, 2012
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Citizens can get training to be local candidates at ChamberPAC workshop Feb. 4

Citizens considering running for local office can attend an all-day workshop, Saturday, Feb. 4 presented by ChamberPAC, the San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce's political action committee.

The nonpartisan Candidate School will feature elected officials and campaign consultants and experts reviewing the basics of running an election, ethics in leadership, fundraising, grassroots campaign tactics and more. In addition, attendees will receive policy briefing on current issues and upcoming ballot measures.

"This is a one-of-a-kind workshop," said Pat Sausedo, vice president of public policy. "The breadth and depth of the panels, and the experts we have assembled to provide the information is unique and invaluable to anyone considering a run for public office. In addition, potential candidates will make some great new contacts as they attempt to grow their network."

The first ChamberPAC candidate school was conducted last fall. The event will be held 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the chamber offices, 101 W. Santa Clara St., San Jose. To register, contact Pat Sausedo at pats@sjchamber.com or 408-291-5262.
